Marvellous Enduring Love of Harry Thaw for His Young Wife Most Remarkable Feature of Tragedy Unfolded at His Trial

Audience Felt a Thrill When Lawyer Gleason in Latter Half of Address to Jury Told of Prisoner's Master Passion.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith,

T took Assistant District-Attorney Garvan exactly seven minutes to state the case of the prosecution at the trial of Harry Thaw for the killing of Stanford White.

It was a simple, direct, bald statement, of facts brought out at the Coroner's inquest. Indeed, the opening scene of the greatest day of the trial seemed merely a Coroner's inquest, with more auditors and a more imposing setting. Lawrence White, the son of the victim, a fireman, a policeman, an engineer of the Madison Square Roof and several spectators testified to the manner of the killing on the night of

MR. GLEASON'S OPENING.

Mr. Gleason, of counsel for the defense, took possibly one hour and a half to open the case for Harry Thaw. He spoke at the beginning to an audience largely hostile. He is said to have accorded scant courtesy had or this nations would have ploused Mr. Greason's worst enemy, but it
